"THE WORKINGMAN HAS STOOD ALL HE CAN BEAR."—MOTHER JONES

Tells How Injustice and Massacres Have Maddened Him —Says Whole Country Is On Verge of Revolution—An Important Interview.

BY CHARLES H. NEWELL

Denver, Col., May 4.—"The working people of America have stood all they can bear."

It was Mother Jones speaking with a conviction that startled me.

"What does all this strife and turmoil growing out of the coal strike and the Ludlow massacre mean?" I had asked this 82-year old, white-haired, ruddy faced forceful woman who lay in Gov. Ammons' military bullpens in Southern Colorado three months in a vain effort to stir the voting women of the state to protest.

"And it means that the workers would rather die fighting to protect their women and children than to die in death-trap mines producing more wealth for the Rockefeller's to use in crushing their children," she added.

"It means that the whole nation is on the verge of a revolution. Get that? That's exactly what it means.
